Whig and Courier.

John S. Hayward, Editor.
THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1847.

The administration feeling that they are entitled to an account for the blood and treasure expended in the present war, they are making various movements to shift the responsibility of commencing the war from their shoulders upon others. A title to the Washington Union has been published, showing that General Taylor has recommended that the troops be sent to the north of the Rio Grande, and also showing that the administration has refused to do so. This is a very serious charge, and one which the administration must be prepared to meet. It is a charge which the Whig and Courier will not shrink from making, and which we will follow up with all the facts and arguments that we can collect.

The Whig and Courier has within him a reserved sadder emergency when his usual pained worn down and required. This reserved power of the system is not in the ordinary influence of the Whig and Courier, but in the power of the Whig and Courier to throw off the burden of the system, and to show the world that the Whig and Courier is not a mere organ of the administration, but a true and independent organ of the people.

The Battle-ground of Buena Vista.

The battle-ground of Buena Vista is a place of great interest to the people of the United States. It is a place where the fate of the nation was decided, and where the blood of our heroes was shed. It is a place which should be preserved as a national monument, and which should be visited by all who are interested in the history of our country.

BY THE LAST MAIL.

The N O Castle in allusion to the bombardment of Vera Cruz, says, "If the bombardment should prove inadequate to the opening of a breach in the walls of the castle, an attempt will be made to board and 1,500 sailors, armed with cutlasses and battle axes, will be let into the castle. For a hand to hand fight, sailors are superior to any other class of men of war. The naval force of Commodore Perry, in a ship, will prove fully equal to 5 or 6,000 Mexican soldiers."

It is thought by some intelligent officers, that the bombardment will take place at night. Boats being thrown out and stationed at certain points the ships might approach close to the castle, and direct their fire with more effect against its walls."

From Vera Cruz. Camp of the Resister Army, March 15th. The North has been subdued. The Resister Army, on the other side of the hell-forged forces at the time of writing. This morning at 3 o'clock the pickets were sent out to the front. The enemy's forces were seen at the center of the line, and a sharp cannonade was opened. The Resister Army supported us were about to receive a night attack, the camp was under arms in an instant, but the alarm amounted to nothing. As a great storm of shells succeeded a great attack, no doubt in a day or two will have news of extraordinary interest to the community as to the result of our operations.
